"The sooner our society admits its tary outburst soon in seasons will be for us all." - Martin Luther King Jr.

"There are no 'white' or 'coloured' signs on the foxholes or graveyards of battle." - John F. Kennedy

Academic Focus

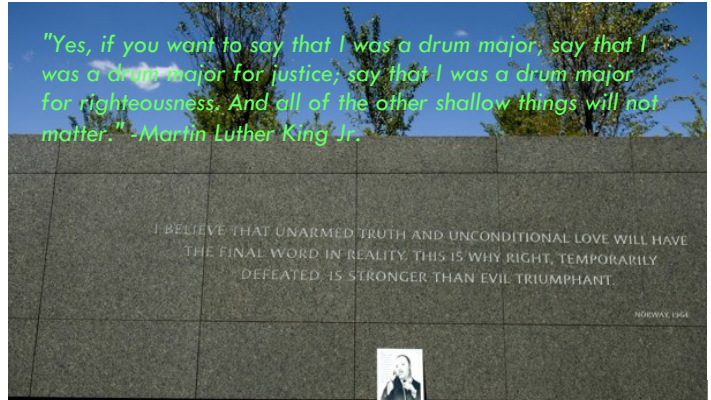

Participants will make up a vibrant rolling classroom community which will have the opportunity to visit some of the historical sites in which the Civil Rights Movement took place as well as to meet and interact with many of the veterans of this movement. Enroute to these destinations students will view documentaries and engage in discussions with faculty leaders which will explore life in the segregationist south and the origins and leaders of the Civil Rights Movement. This experience will enrich students' understanding of one of the most important social movements of our time. The trip will pay special attention to the power of protest and the ways in which courage and a deep commitment to social justice mark the participants in this movement, both black and white.

"I swear to the Lord I still can't see Why Democracy means Everybody but me." - Langston Hughes, The Black Man Speaks
