Academic Focus

This program offers Nursing and Healthcare Administration majors an opportunity for students to compare public health education, policies, and delivery of health care within Ireland and the United States. Epidemiological principles will be utilized in discussing global health issues, environmental health, infectious disease, and health disparities within populations both in the US and abroad. Concepts of vulnerability to natural and man-made disasters, and the challenges of prevention and health care advocacy for the preparedness of all will be explored within the context of social justice. Community disaster preparation and management will be discussed while focusing on public health emergencies such as past conflict resolutions during the “Troubles” in Ireland as well as the Great Famine will be explored with current events in the world today. Local, regional, national, and international preparedness will be evaluated with an emphasis on the effects within the local community. Working with Mary Immaculate College students will participate in lectures and tours that will explore Irish culture and many facets of the Irish healthcare system.

Course Expectations

Students will register for NUR475 in the spring term and will begin the course in January with a weekly 50 min didactic course on Public Health and conclude the course in Ireland late May to early June. The overseas program is required to complete the courses; thus all students registered for the course must be fully accepted to the program.

Accommodations/Meals

Lodging, meals and on site logistics will be arranged by Mary Immaculate College. All accommodations are included in the program fee. Students will reside in centrally located apartment style residences. Students share a room with 1-3 people within an apartment as well as shared living space and kitchen facilities in. Linens and towels will be provided.

Eligibility Requirements

- NUR475 requires junior status.
- Availability of academic credits to fulfill degree requirements.
- Good disciplinary, financial and academic standing.
- Participation in mandatory pre-departure orientation sessions.
