Become a Leader in Justice or Cybersecurity

The administration of justice and homeland security programs endeavor to address the professional requirements of justice leaders and practitioners in an increasingly technological and global environment. The objective of the graduate program is to develop morally imbued professionals who will serve their communities guided by the principles of equal respect.

The courses and these programs will focus on:

- The philosophical, historical, ethical, behavioral, technological, legal, and policy dimensions of the discipline;
- An analytical approach to practice within the criminal justice system;
- Practical tools to improve effectiveness within the various professional roles;
- The most current and relevant information in a structure that is dynamic and adaptable to rapidly evolving trends.

Students may choose between three concentrations: Leadership in Justice, Digital Forensics or Cybersecurity and Intelligence. The degree may be completed online; select courses are also offered in person.
