- 2010 The Providence Phoenix. Review of Field Below, By Johnette Rodriguez. The Electronic copy is no longer attainable. Scanned copy furnished upon request. "Throughout the piece, the male dancers hold these poles, either vertically, horizontally, or at a tilt, with numerous variations of Ricci draped between them, wrapped around one, hanging by one knee, or even air-pedaling with the two poles under her arms. The choreography and Ricci's performance lend palpable weight to the yearning in the song."
- 2009 The Providence Phoenix, Johnette Rodriguez's review of The Risk of Trust. The Electronic copy unattainable. Scanned copy furnished upon request. "The other new work that blew viewers away was by Festival dancer Mark Harootian, who has created many memorable pieces for Up Close."
- 2008 The Providence Journal. Review of A Spektor of Things, by Bryn Rourke. The Electronic copy is no longer attainable. Scanned copy furnished upon request. "Don't Fall for the disclaimer work in progress. "A Spektor of Things" Looked pretty polished at last weekend's Up Close, On Hope Show at Festival Ballet Providence. The Piece choreographed by Mark Harootian, is one of the nine in this two-hour show that ranges from good to very good, with emphasis on the latter. You see classical ballet, pop, jazz, and modern dance. In fact, you can see each style in one work "A Spektor of Things".
